

WINTER 2017
VOLUME XVI NUMBER I

INTO THE HEART OF EUROPE

THE NEWSLETTER OF DISCOVER EUROPE LTD.

I never could quite agree with T.S. Eliot, that April is the cruellest month. He went to school in New England and must have been aware of just how awful February can be! Perhaps it's worse now than in his youth, as big fluffy snowfalls seemed to be increasingly replaced with sleet and freezing rain. The trip we have leaving for Madeira at the end of this month is looking very inviting!

Our most popular winter destination, however, continues to be Iceland, with 16 tours going there between now and the beginning of April. I do love Iceland - I was there twice last year and am going again this month - but as always, my thoughts at this time of year, turn toward spring. Unlike Eliot's protagonist in the Wasteland, I find joy, not dread, in the annual renewal.

And we are looking forward to a very busy spring here at Discover Europe, with trips visiting every corner of the continent. To help us handle the extra volume, I am particularly pleased to welcome my older son, Alex, to our team here in New Hampshire. I will, however, resist the temptation to add "& Son" to the company name!

So, please look through this latest newsletter and see if we can't tempt you with some of our wonderful offerings. We have some new destinations, some new short, getaway trips, and a whole collection of tours that just stay in one place (our Let's Unpack series) and take day trips from that central hub.

I look forward to seeing you in Europe!
Keep traveling.

ISLAND LIFE

What is it about an island vacation? In looking over our calendar of tours for this year we couldn't help but notice that we offer trips to just about every major island in Europe! Going to an island in Europe presents a special opportunity. It is easy to go from seashore to mountains to plains and see a variety of topography; to taste the specialties, and experience the culture with minimal travelling.

Think of sitting on a terrace in Mallorca's beautiful village of Deia, where Robert Graves made his home, in the shadow of Teix mountain, looking out over olive trees and ocean; or biting into one of Madeira's exotic fruits such as the tamarillo, a cross between a plum and a tomato; or why not head to Sardinia and see the prehistoric megaliths that are scattered across this country before diving into one of their national dishes of porcheddu (suckling pig).

Or go on our Wild Islands of Scotland tour to spot razorbills, guillemots, puffins, gannets and much more at the Noss National Nature Reserve. Islands offer a single culture within a manageable time frame that allows the traveler to have a more in depth experience of the country. The pace of life seems more relaxed. The hustle and bustle of daily life slows down and time is on your side to absorb, explore and ponder the beauty of island life. Here are some island trips we are offering this year.

LISBON: CITY OF SEVEN HILLS

Known also as The City of Seven Hills (like Rome), this vibrant city sings through its Fado, (a beautiful but eerie feminine song sung in late night tabernas), vibrates with a Bohemian beat in the Bairro Alto district, where night life abounds, and stands tall with its many monuments and miradouros (viewpoints) of the port. You can walk (bring good shoes for hills and cobblestones) or take the many forms of public transport, including trams, to the historic museums, chapels, squares and gardens that define one of the oldest cities in Europe.

After visiting the Basilicas gardens, or taking a sunset cruise along the Tagus river, wind your way along the cobbled lanes in the old Chiado neighborhood with its old style cafes, theatres, and bookshops. Or visit one of the many quaint restaurants serving octopus, tuna, or the national dish:

bacalhau a bras,
salted codfish in a creamy sauce over layered potatoes.

This is a city of cobbled lanes,
late night bars
for sipping port, and surprises for those who like to wander without a destination. Let Lisbon's winding narrow streets guide you with their sumptuous aromas, enticing sounds, bustling life, and stunning views. Stay a while and blend into this sensuous city, you won't regret it!

COURIER'S CORNER

David Phillips

Q: WHERE IS YOUR FAVORITE TOUR DESTINATION?

A: For its warmly handsome old houses in honey-colored stone that line its incomparable main street; its wool church both welcoming and imposing; its fine hotels and pubs and restaurants; its fascinating Arts and Crafts heritage; the wondrous Cotswold landscapes surrounding, and most of all for the idyllic gardens of all varieties - Hidcote, Kiftsgate, Mill Dene, Bourton House - within a stone's throw: for all this, Chipping Campden is almost perfect.

Q: DO YOU HAVE A FAVORITE CITY?

A: I'm trying to think of my favorite city meanwhile because that seems like the easiest question. I'm inclined to say Toulouse, or maybe Seville but then again I've got a big soft spot for Turin. Ljubljana is a little jewel. And Berlin is so dynamic and extraordinary, and I love the culture and sophistication of Vienna. Amsterdam is the most beautiful city in Europe, if you ask me. London is my home, it's got everything and I wouldn't want to live anywhere else. Then again, you simply can't beat Rome. And I haven't even mentioned Paris or Budapest or Prague, Lisbon, Porto or Barcelona. I wonder what Stockholm is like...

Q: IS THERE A SPECIAL MOMENT THAT STICKS OUT ON A DISCOVER EUROPE TRIP?

A: I love being read to. On a trip to Wales, a sort of literary pilgrimage, with a group from Massachusetts, we had lunch one day with a poet called Menna Elfyn. She had a soft, caressing voice. She told us wonderful stories, disarmingly funny, about her activist past, and then began to read her Welsh-language poems. We didn't understand them, of course, but were all seduced by the subtle, honey-rich sounds, at once familiar and exotic, and by the strange rhythms, rhymes and assonances of that poetic tradition. When she translated the poems for us, these mysteries resolved into stories and observations that were funny, touching, full of insight and truth. For me and I think for the whole group it felt like a uniquely privileged window into a fascinating and beautiful language and culture.

Q: WHAT DO YOU ALWAYS PACK?

A: Binoculars, Swarovski compact HD, 8 x 25. I can't pretend I use them all the time - in fact there have been plenty of trips when they've never left the comfort of my suitcase - but I always pack them. Just in case. For the theatre maybe or the opera; for a detail in a fresco or mosaic high up in the corner of a wall; for a sculpted capital in a Romanesque church; for a possible sighting of a bird I'm hoping to see skulking in a reedbed somewhere or soaring up in the mountains; for gazing far away. Binoculars and maps, lots of maps. You can never have enough maps.

ITALIAN DAVID

Q: CAN YOU SHARE YOUR MOST MEMORABLE DINING EXPERIENCE ON A TRIP?

A There've been lots - I can't forget a birthday dinner in the hills above Taormina when Mount Etna erupted before our eyes as we sang Happy Birthday - but I single out a lunch one day in a restaurant called The Old Swiss House in Lucerne. Beautiful, indulgent, sophisticated but theatrical, eye-wateringly expensive, with a spectacular wine cellar and preposterously delicious food. We had the simplest, most commonplace dishes imaginable - tomato soup, wiener schnitzel and chocolate mousse - and they were transformed somehow from prosaic to sublime and they were gorgeously served and I fell in love with each dish in turn. This was seven or eight years ago, I suppose, and I'm still in love with the chocolate mousse today. I've never been back. I hope it never changes.

TAKE OFF AIRPORT HOURS

by Tiffany Mannion

I land in a pile of stale air, tissues and trash on the carpet and tangled in a mess of headphone wires. As I wait for the seatbelt sign to switch off, I grab my phone and wait for permission to power up. Everyone bounds from their seats to get their carry-on and their coats and their neck pillows. I get my Mobile Passport App on my phone. I turn it on and walk through the four brief questions for international arrivals and receive an electronic receipt with an encrypted barcode. Three minutes later, I grab my gear and head out into the lines. The difference is, with myMobile Passport App, I head into the Global Entry lines. I scan my encrypted barcode on the electronic scanners, following the lines for Global Entry and I am free. Out in the whipping winds of Boston's Logan Airport and drinking in the awe-somely fresh feeling of being home.

How do you get it? Visit www.mobilepassport.us. See if your arrival airport is using the Mobile Passport App. If they are, simply download the app on your smartphone. The app will walk you through the quick initial set up. This free app is a great way to take off airport hours and get you home as quickly as possible.

SCHOOL IS IN SESSION!

There are, however, no text books to read, equations to solve, and certainly no cafeteria food! The lively sounds of open air food markets replace the school bell, calling you to class. It's market day in Bologna, Italy!

Your lessons start the moment you breathe in. Tables piled high with produce, the colours of the rainbow and beyond. Each farmer and producer proudly displaying the bounty of their hard work. The rapid fire exchange of Italian sings out while each perfectly sun ripened tomato is selected. Once your basket is full, you head back to the cooking school ready to roll up your sleeves and dig in. Courses are replaced with courses as you learn to dig into recipes that have been perfected in Italian kitchens for centuries. Working alongside the chef, you will roll and shape pastas with accompanying sauces happily bubbling away on the stove. The school day ends with a meal, nurtured from farm to table as you sit down together to relax, reflect, and dine. A+ all around!

Want to head back to school with us? Join us for THE ITALIAN KITCHEN, October 5th - 14th 2017.

INTRODUCING ALEX INDUNI

Alex is our new Operations Assistant and handles flight bookings and other day-to-day tasks around the office. Having spent most of his adult life in the mountains of Colorado, any place that the temperature is below freezing and the mountain scenery is breathtaking is the place for him. He has traveled extensively while growing up with his father (Michael Induni). He learned to swim on the south coast of France, has chased falcons in England, ridden scooters in Mallorca and picked pomegranates in Greece. He dreams of exploring the Alps in Northern Italy and enjoying some real Italian food.
